3) Lenin, Selected Works, Vol. X, p. 235. The Black Dimension isn't something that I am superimposing upon Lenin. It first appeared in 1912 in Lenin's work, "New Data on the Laws of Development of Capitalism in Agriculture" (See ~~Lenin's Selected Works~~ Vol. XII, pp. 190-282). It was used widely in the disputes in the US, among Communists, Trotskyists, and others as to whether the "Negro Question" was a National Question, and whether there was a relationship between slavery here and the serfs in Russia. In 1915, in his Notebooks on Imperialism, Lenin had references to the fact that the IWW had a more correct position on the Negro question than the SP, which, stressed Lenin, "built separate locals for Negroes and Whites in Mississippi!" The question came up a third time in his debates with Bukharin whose reference to the ~~refrxxxxxx~~ Hottentots he criticized, and finally was made into a new category which combined nationalism and internationalism in that Theses on National Question.
