But romantic adventurism will prove equally as destructive by distorting the truth, pushing when retreat would be wisdom, giving hopes to the masses in the face of doom.

Will the textile workers be able to secure such leadership? Only if such leadership is theirs can they hope to achieve any gains.

Garage Strike Ends in Gains

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—On Saturday night, Jan. 19, the membership of Local Union No. 382, Garage Mechanics, voted to accept the strike settlement as drawn up by committees from the employers and the union. The settlement terms are approximately the same as those upon which the St. Paul strike was ended: a minimum of one hour for mechanics; a minimum of $18 weekly for washers, greasers, fitters and attendants; time and a-half for overtime; 30 hours a week guaranteed; union recognition; no discrimination, etc.

The settlement represents real gains for the workers in Minneapolis garages and auto body shops. Not every one of the demands was won with this strike, but with the relationship of forces it was certainly the best agreement that could have been obtained. Hundreds of workers, furthermore, have come into Union 159 and 382 during the last two weeks. Both organizations now have a firm foothold in their industry.

Act Against Chiselling

On Sunday an overflow mass meeting of garage workers was held at the General Drivers Local 574 auditorium. Among the speakers were Bob Cramer, editor of the Minneapolis Labor Review, Herman Husman, international representative, Henry Schultz, secretary of the State Employees Assn. and Farrell Hobbs, business agent of Local 574. A broad committee was elected at the meeting to check up on the houses, beginning early Monday morning, to see that no chiselling on the workers takes place.
