Tenants to seek OMB intervention

By NORMAN G. BROWNE

The South of St. Jamestown tenant and homeowner associations have embarked on a two-pronged strategy to combat the growing crisis in their area.

One tactic calls for the enlistment of widespread community support to force a political settlement of the problem. At the same time, lawyers for the groups in the area will try and draw the Ontario Municipal Board (OMB) into the controversy through the use of a little-known section of the Ontario Planning Act.

Many of the tenants and homeowners in the area now see the setting up of a "working committee" as a delaying action in the part of Meridian and City Council.

The City gave the impression it was doing something for the area while actually it did nothing but get the residents to run around organizing and attending meetings.

And of course, while all this was going on, Meridian continued to evict and demolish and plan the building of more high-rises.

A quote from a recent South of St. Jamestown newsletter aptly shows the tactics being used by Meridian:

"Those of us who have seen Phil Roth of Meridian in action at Working Committee meetings have noticed some strange things. He has declared that he would rather suffer the bad publicity even if it means losing "every penny" he has invested in South St. Jamestown, than extend the tenacies in Bleecker and Ontario streets.

"He has tried to make individual deals (without success) with key representatives of the tenants and homeowners. At the same time he has resorted to abuse against both groups, calling the homeowners "asinine" for wanting to discuss the effects of high density in the area.

"On two occasions he has come to meetings in the company of bodyguards armed with guns. The mere mention of West St. Jamestown at a recent meeting made Roth incoherent with rage."

South St. Jamestown residents are seeking widespread community support through small block meetings, large general meetings, the passing out of informational leaflets and appeals to the news media.

The appeal for OMB intervention is expected to go to the Ontario Appeal Court first. If the case is won there, it is expected they will ask the OMB to intercede. The cost for these legal proceedings is expected to be paid for out of the South of St. Jamestown Defense Fund.

The OMB is usually the court of last resort and it will establish a precedent if it is brought into the battle at this stage.

Master Antenna TV system promised for St. Jamestown

By MAGGIE SIGGINS

It looks as though St. James Town tenants will finally get improved television service. Meridian Development are installing a Master Antenna Television Reception System in the next little while which promises to give the clearest possible reception.

Ten channels - 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 9, 11, St. James Town's own station 12 and two UHF stations will be available. A Meridian spokesman said it has not been determined which UHF channels will be available but it will likely be 19, the Toronto ETV station and 29 the American "movie" station. That would mean that only tenants with an UHF converter in their sets would receive UHF channel 17, the American educational television station, Channel 79, the new Toronto private station scheduled to open in the fall and the proposed Toronto French language station.

Rogers Cable TV are currently negotiating with Ontario Housing Corporation to install their service in the public housing sector of St. James Town. They also provide 10 channels, but it has not been decided which ones will be available.

A spokesman for the company said they hope to eventually provide 20 channels, including all existing UHF stations.

Both systems will also clear up color reception which has been rather bad on some sets.

News Roundup: Who's doing what across the Ward

The NDP party seems to be in complete disarray in this area. Exhaustive attempts to find a federal candidate for Rosedale riding have met with failure so far and one nominating meeting was cancelled at the last minute. Ward Seven NDP have also cancelled a meeting at the last minute. They are supposed to meet to discuss running a candidate in the coming municipal elections. Warren Beamish is the Progressive Conservative candidate for Rosedale in the next Federal election. A resident of Rosedale, he received the nomination at a meeting held last week in Castle Frank school. Charles Rolfe has declared himself a candidate for alderman for Ward Seven in the next municipal elections. Charlie ran 8th in the last election with 324 votes.

DEPARTURES: Nina Herman has left the employ of Central Neighbourhood House where she worked as a community organizer in the south of Carlton area. She was instrumental in organizing a number of citizen groups in that area. Dave Todman, another active, community worker in the area has also left for British Columbia. His wife Cathy Todman supplied most of the recipes for the FOOD column occasionally printed in SEVEN NEWS. Skip Hambling, a field organizer for the Provincial Community Development Branch has left for greener pastures on the east coast. Skip researched and wrote the DelZotto Apartment story that appeared some months back in SEVEN NEWS. More recently he was caught in a cross-fire between his own branch, the Social Planning Council and the community over a proposal to establish a Community Secretariat in the area.

Simpson Avenue residents are upset over repairs being made to their street. The new pavement level is 5 inches lower than the old and there are problems with sodding, sidewalks and catch basins. They are asking a meeting with City Works Department. Residents in the King-Parliament area met recently with Dennis Barker the chief planner for the city. Their request for a planner for the area was denied and the development department has also refused to give them a planner. Hearings before the Ontario Municipal Board over the proposed apartment towers on Sherbourne Street should end this week. A decision isn't expected until this fall.

CAR OWNERS NOTE: A motion is on the order paper at City Hall to have free overnight parking for all of Ward Seven. However the motion won't be dealt with by City Council until they meet again in the fall. Berkeley Street has been made one-way north from Shuter to Carlton.

Those picnic tables in Allan Gardens with checker-boards painted on them were placed there at the insistence of Joe Cassar, a local checker enthusiast. Joe also repainted the boards three times at his own expense since they were put in the park. A lot of complaints are piling up about the pedestrian traffic lights at Winchester and Parliament. A lot of people press the button and then claim they have to wait five minutes for the light to change. Could be the lights are controlled by the main traffic computer and the computer doesn't recognize pedestrians. . . ?

The site of the old Dunlop plant won't be ready for use as a park as originally scheduled. Greenspoon, the wreckers were supposed to have turned it over to the city last week. They claim it will be another 60 days or more. They suffer a $100 a day penalty but the Dunlop Park Committee plans to have a little "talk" with them and also ask the city to blacklist them in future. . . Another parkette lost again for another summer is at the corner of Gerrard and Parliament. SEVEN NEWS sent down a reporter-photographer team to find out what was going on but were refused a story. Shortly afterwards, however, a sign appeared above that ugly hoarding that it was a sewer construction site. At least that should end rumours that a bomb shelter was being built under Gerrard street. . .

Both Aldermen Karl Jaffary and John Sewell are planning vacations this week. Sewell is leaving for a week's holidays in the maritimes. That book by John Sewell in his term of office as an alderman should be ready for fall publication. One more chapter remains to be written plus an introduction and editing. Graham Fraser, a Ward Seven resident, also has a book coming out this fall on Trefann Court. Ted Plantos, Ward Seven's Poet-in-Residence, has published his first book of poems in a limited edition. Copies are available at the Parliament Library House.

The Don Vale Community Centre is still looking for a co-ordinator. Salary is $130 a week for 3 months. Irene Lee is 24 years of age and the mother of 3. She is also a youth worker in the Don District.

Her problem is that when her field work takes her into the local taverns, she is constantly being challenged by the waiters for being under age. One high-rise tenant has been evicted and two more are being threatened with eviction for distributing SEVEN NEWS in their building. But an impressive array of legal talent is working on the problem. Freedom of the press is at stake. After a year of negotiation, the Degrassi, Wardell and Cummings Action Committee got the city Parks Department to put in a children's parkette on Cummings Avenue. Now they are going to press for a wading pool and fence for the park. Two women, one a distributor and one an ardent reader, met each other again for the first time in 35 years at the SEVEN NEWS party last week.

Thanks to Eastdale Meat Market, Sam's Fairway Variety and the Day-old Bakery Store on Carlton street for their donations of food to the party. Thanks also to Ron Lorenz for his chore as disc jockey.

Cherry Beach

The TTC is running a trial bus service to Cherry Beach this summer. This beach is located just east of Parliament St. at the foot of Cherry St.

The Pape bus running every 24 minutes every day goes from Parliament and King to Cherry St.

BEACH CLEANED

The beach has been cleaned up now. It was cut off for a few years when the expressways were built at the south end of the ward. But the plans for the beach will not last for long. A 1,000 acre outer harbour is being built and the Eastern Channel is being widened with the result that Cherry Beach Beach will disappear.

So go and enjoy the beach while you can. If you can find a boat or canoe, it is possible to paddle your way over to the island.

TORONTO ISLAND

And don't forget Toronto Island. Ferries run every fifteen minutes. A round trip ticket costs 50 cents. On Center Island, there is a small amusement park, a German pub, and gardens. It is often crowded, but once you get over to Ward's or Hanlan islands, it is quiet and the islands are still untouched.

Cycling trips for teenagers

An Opportunity for Youth Project is going to sponsor and organize bicycle hikes for young people, between the ages of 12 and 17, living in east Toronto.

The types of trips will be organized by the participants and their leaders. But here is an idea of what's in store: a trip from Orillia to Algonquin Park through to Ottawa, including stops for a few days' hiking, and a day in Ottawa before being bused back to Toronto; A trip north of Quebec City and then a few days in the city itself; bicycling and hiking around Manitoulin Island in Georgian Bay.

A two week trip is being planned from August 13th to 27th. It will cost $30 and then $15 a week for food.

It is not necessary that the participants have a bike, though if they have one, it will be useful. The groups of participants will be from 10 to 12 with three trained leaders.

Well in advance of the trip, there will be an information night for parents, to give them a chance to meet all of the leaders and to ask any questions they might have.

Teens at Opp House get it together

By VALERIE ROSS
Photos by BILL RENO

"Opportunity" House is Home for nineteen kids. Some of them have come there from the courts, some from social workers, and some from rough situations with parents.

The kids are in their early and middle teens. Both boys and girls live with six staff members.

"Opportunity House" is actually a misleading term, as there are two houses. Eight kids live at 11 Bowden, and eleven at 301 Broadview.

Opportunity House(s) opened in June 1971. The project was initiated by the Armour Heights Rotary Club and the United Church of Canada, and members of the Board of Directors are from these two founding organizations.

Gord Cressy, Ward 7 education trustee, is the Executive Director.

The project is 80% funded by the provincial government. It is an accredited institution under the Children's Institutions Act., which puts Opportunity House under the economic care of the Department of Social and Family Services. The rest comes from private sources, the City, or sometimes the kids' parents.

They are supporting more than a pair of buildings perched on the edge of the Don. Opportunity House people go on trips to Ottawa, on weekend outings to farms, and have travelled across Canada to Newfoundland. Local teachers come in to tutor, but the kids attend community schools. Special recreational programmes have been arranged between Opportunity House and Eastminster Church, and the Broadview Y.

The staff meet with the kids every Monday, and all decisions are made collectively. "We think that's important; it's a pretty unique situation," says one staff worker.

The next part is written by Janet Woods, one of the girls living in Opp. House.

I live in a Group Home and that is why I'm writing this. This Home is co-ed, and everybody in it works and strives together. Most of the adolescents here, including me, have been in trouble before we came here.

Training schools, and other institutions, are, I feel, an awful place to send an adolescent. They are usually out in the country, away from other people. This is bad for the kids, because they don't get a chance to readjust to community life.

Families are sometimes bad for the people in them as well. There are a number of runaway adolescents, because they can't get on with their parents. This causes a lot of stress on all members of the family, and ends in unhappiness for everyone. Also in a family, adolescents do not have the chance to meet new and different people, and are restricted in their ability to accept and utilize responsibility.

Due to the reasons I have stated above, I feel that Group Homes are the best answer. You learn a lot of good things, live right in a community, and have a lot of good things happen.
